Who can help with Money Management?

Who to see and when: FINANCES

Accountant	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> It is an accountants job to stay on top of the ever-changing tax landscape so they can offer their expertise to their clients. Accountants help their clients understand what they are entitled to including their potential tax deductions, calculate their capital gains, and determine any potential write-offs
Financial Counsellor	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Qualified skilled professionals who provide information, advice and advocacy to people in financial difficulty. Their services are non-judgmental, free, independent and confidential. They will listen to your problems and help you with things like: bills or fines you're struggling to pay; being harassed by debt collectors; gas, electricity or phone disconnection; being evicted from your house; car accidents with no insurance; tax debts. Financial counsellors do not offer legal advice.
Financial Advisor/Planner	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Professionals who can help you plan and manage bigger financial decisions. Can help you set financial goals so you feel confident that your future plans are achievable. If you're not on track to achieving your goals, an adviser can help you put the right strategies in place, or set more realistic goals. Financial advice can be useful at turning points in your life, like when you're starting a family, being retrenched, planning for retirement or managing an inheritance. When you meet with an advisor for the first time, it's important to work out what you want to get from the advice. An adviser should take the time to discuss what's important to you and ask about your short and long term goals before they make any recommendations.
